

I am writing to express my strong opinion that the FCC should not implement any policy or proposal that will weaken Indiana's telephone privacy law.

Before I signed up for the no-call list, I received an average of 3 calls a night during our dinner time and family time. These aggressive phone calls disrupted our family mood. Sometimes it would disrupt meaningful conversations we were having as a family.

There were times that my 80+ year old mother would answer my phone and the caller would aggressively market to her. She would often become flustered and anxious after these phone calls.

Since we have been on the no-call list, we have not had one phone call. It is not an exaggeration to say that the quality of our home life has improved because of it. We have peaceful meals. We can engage with each other in conversations without worrying about being interrupted and agitated by these phone calls.

Again, I am writing to stress that you should not put in place anything that will weaken Indiana's phone privacy bill.
